A moment of reflection

School leaders across the United States are facing a moment of reflection and grief as we've learned details concerning the Uvalde, Texas school shooting. At one time, schools, like churches, were the last place one would expect mass violence. When victims are children, the question of why reverberates loudest. While we wait to hear of ways this tragedy may have been avoided, each superintendent, principal, teacher, bus driver, custodian, support worker, and coach must recommit themselves to vigilance. Each parent, school board member, and elected official must recommit themselves in the very same manner. Vigilance in loving and seeing our students when they are with us. Vigilance in caring and supporting our families as much as we are able, and vigilance in keeping our campuses safe. Our hearts are heavy, and many questions remain. Let us love and speak kindness to those around us, and be in prayer for those we are unable to reach.
